ON THE COVER

This week Aviation Week publishes two print editions. On the cover far left, the second Bell 525 Relentless prototype flies above Palo Duro Canyon State Park in Texas. Five 525s will take part in a 1,500-flight-hour FAA certification campaign that is expected to lead to first deliveries next year (page 68). A special report on new helicopters and the industry's struggles to offset plummeting demand from oil and gas producers begins on page 64. Photo by The Cohen Studios. Also in both editions are an update on advances in hybrid turbine-electric propulsion (page 44), a report on the latest advances in air traffic management (page 52) and a chat with Pratt & Whitney's blunt new president (page 43). The cover of the MRO Edition includes photos from Haeco Americas and Aviation Week's Sean Broderick. Broderick's report on how MROs are increasing their data-driven safety efforts begins on page MRO4. Aviation Week publishes a digital edition every week. Read it at
