

AN APPRECIATION

- 9 | John Young, 1930-2018

DEFENSE

- 18 | U.S. Air Force pilot training taps virtual reality and AI
- 20 | Japan plans Aegis Ashore, stand-off missiles and maybe F-35Bs
- 22 | Russian forces in Syria thwart first swarming drone strike
- 54 | Uncertainty surrounds Turkey's air and missile defense vision

SPACE

- 24 | Falcon Heavy to become world's most powerful operational rocket
- 25 | Analysts disagree about fate of Zuma satellite launched by SpaceX
- 46 | Review greenlights Ariane 6 production
- 47 | China plans giant constellations of tiny satellites
- 48 | Aerospace Corp. expands space counter-collision studies

URBAN AIR TRANSPORT

- 26 | Bell unveils thinking on air taxis with cabin demo at CES

UNMANNED AIRCRAFT

- 35 | Boeing HorizonX tests disruption strategy with cargo UAV

COMMERCIAL AVIATION

- 36 | MC-21 narrowbody flight tests symbolize Russian ambitions
- 39 | European carriers look to Latin America for growth

TECHNOLOGY

- 41 | Lindbergh flies into electric VTOL air taxi market
- 42 | French region supports Safran's hydrogen fuel-cell effort

SAFETY

- 40 | U.S. experts split on drivers of airline safety record

INTERVIEW

- 44 | 10 Questions for L3 Technologies' new CEO

ANATOMY OF THE CIRRUS VISION JET

- 61 | The SF50 by the numbers

CARGO MARKET

- 62 | Booming e-commerce sector drives air cargo demand

EDITORIAL

- 66 | A poison pill for defense?
- 66 | SpaceX, engine of progress

ON THE COVER

Person of the Year Tom Enders transformed Airbus from an inefficient European conglomerate into a real company and shook up the industry in 2017 with a deal to acquire a controlling stake in Bombardier's C Series. But he also faces the challenges of corporate infighting and a corruption scandal. Jens Flottau highlights Enders' eventful year beginning on page 28. Airbus photo.

Aviation Week publishes a digital edition every week. Read it at

Access exclusive online features from articles accompanied by this icon.